

GOVERNOR ASKS MORE TAXES TO PROVIDE RELIEF

Problem Is Heading For Showdown Before Senate Today

TWO-YEAR PROGRAM TO BE CONSIDERED

House Taxation Group
Schedules Hearings
Thursday

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, April 13.—Ohio's turbulent, controversial relief problem headed for a showdown in the senate today—two days before the expiration of a stop-gap measure and a crisis which state officials called unparalleled in its seriousness.

As senators took up their two-year relief bill, high lights in the situation were:

Urges New Taxes

Gov. Martin L. Davey urged enactment of new taxes for the state's and counties' share of the relief bill.

Protesting relief clients from Northern counties decided to return to their homes after being barred again from the state house where they were ejected last week.
Senate leaders indicated they would not act on relief taxes until they disposed of the biennial appropriations from which they still hoped to pare enough to meet relief needs.

The house taxation committee scheduled hearings beginning Wednesday on relief tax proposals.

Governor Davey sent to the legislature an urgent message asserting the relief problem would become "a crisis of the first magnitude" on April 15.

He urged "foolish and absurd" proposals of senators to finance a $7,000,000 relief appropriation from the general revenue fund or to trim biennial appropriations by $10-$20,000 a year for the same purpose.

Three-Point Program

The executive, after conferring with commissioners from eight counties, told the legislature it should pass a three-point program:

1. Permanent or two-year relief law to provide for administration.

2. A state tax to raise $7,000-$8,000,000 for the state's share of the cost.

3. Enabling legislation to permit local communities to raise their portion.

Senate leaders answered by putting today's calendar. Majority Leader Keith Lawrence said a vote might not be reached before Wednesday.

Democrats and Republicans were called into caucus on relief question before today's sessions of the two houses. Leaders did not disclose the purpose of this move or whether there would be attempts to bind the legislators to any program.

The senate measure would appropriate $7,000,000 for the remainder of this year $2,000,000 in outright grants, $5,000,000 to be matched dollar for dollar by counties. It would provide $8,000,000 for 1938, all to be matched locally.

ALLIANCE, April 13.—Miss Ruth Reagle 20, of East Palestine, member of the intermediate class of Alliance City Hospital Nurses'
Training school, died suddenly early Monday at the Akron Children's hospital where she had been receiving instructions for six weeks.

Miss Reagle's death resulted from an embolism. Although she had been suffering from a slight cold for several days, her condition had not been considered serious.

She was leading her class in scholarship at the time of her death. Mrs. Mary Taylor, superintendent of nurses, said, Miss Reagle would have graduated here in 1938.

Graduated at East Palestine High school in 1934, Miss Reagle was an honored student. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Reagle of East Pal-

City Relief Load Reduced About Half

The relief case load in Salem has dropped about 50 per cent within the past year, figures disclosed by Mrs. Ethel Morris of Leetonia, relief supervisor here, revealed today.

The county is caring for 31 families and non-families in Salem at the present time, where as a year ago the case load, which includes families and non-families, totaled about 75, here also are 17 single persons on the local relief roster today.

Perry township's relief case load has shown a marked decrease within the past year, with only five families and two single persons being cared for today, Mrs. Morris said.

Grass Fires Keep City Firemen Busy

Fire Chief Incent Malloy's state-

11:55 a. m. Monday in a field on East Eighth st., while the second was at 1:18 p. m. on Wilson st.

PROPOSE CHECK ON CITY WATER SYSTEM LEAKS

Survey Possibility Discussed At Meeting of Committee

BUDGET MEASURE TO GO UNSIGNED

Ten-Day Limit On Appropriation Plan Expires
Thursday

Plans for a suggested survey to check possible "leaks in the city's water system, were discussed by members of the water committee of city council, meeting with Mayor George Harroff Monday night.

The session was held in council chambers of city hall. Definite action, however, was deferred.

There have been no developments following Mayor George Har-roff's failure to sign the nine-month appropriation ordinance, passed by council last week. The measure will become effective after Thursday, it is understood, when the 10-day limit set up for such occasions, expires.

The mayor has refused to sign the measure, saying he is dissatisfied with the provisions made for granting wage increases for the police and firemen.

The nine-month appropriation was set at $200,610.57 to allow for estimated municipal expenditures for the remainder of the year. The previous first-quarter budget totaled $43,732.

The new legislation, it was explained by Cletus Paumier, chairman of the council finance committee, provides for a salary increase for police and firemen of about 10 a month.

MILEPOST

It is probable that a milepost on the country's progress toward decision in the judiciary committee closes its hearings on the plan.

The matter then will be acted upon by the committee. Later, there will be debate on the floor of the senate. In the meantime, the house of representatives must follow through a similar procedure. The final decision still is not imminent.

Many weeks ago, opponents of the Roosevelt proposal were warned they would use up their ammunition too early. Then, when administration forces threw all their strength into the final drive, there would be no way to stop them—nothing new or startling to say or do.

A fresh twist to that foreboding has been given by Postmaster General Farley's confident boast that "We have plenty of votes to put this over." Even the President is reported to have told a senator, "Anyway, we have the votes to pass it."

One of two things is true. Either the postmaster general and Mr. Roosevelt are tolerantly letting the people play at representative government without intending to let them use it, or both of them are whistling in the dark to bolster their courage.

The debate has been going against them. Their points have been too weak to stand up under examination. If they now have the votes, they didn't win them on merit. If they don't have them, but only wish they did, their cocksure attitude seems a strange way to placate congressmen laboring under the illusion—at least their constituents hope they are—that even Jim Farley should keep his hands off some things in Washington.

PEACEFUL PERSUASION

"We will not be responsible for their safety or for the action individuals may take. Any accident is not our responsibility," Hugh Thompson, CIO organizer, commenting on what may happen to workmen opposing the union in the General Motors strike at Oshawa, Ont.

This is an extreme case, which makes it a forceful example of one phase of union responsibility that has been neglected in current discussions of that troublesome question. What protection does the unorganized workman have against coercion and terrorism, as practiced by too aggressive converts to the new religion of salvation via John L. Lewis and the closed shop?

Outside of the tenuous restraints imposed by law and inadequately maintained by the police during periods of industrial strife, the hesitant or possibly unwilling subject of union organization "drives" has only one safeguard to rely upon—the common sense of seasoned union leaders who know there is nothing to be gained by violence. A converted brother persuaded to sign up by force can be depended on to break away at the first chance. Where strong arm conversion methods fail, furthermore, a bitter enemy of the union has been created.

Peaceful persuasion may be slow, but it's sure. Organizer Thompson, who pretends to think violence against non-union workmen by union workmen isn't the responsibility of the CIO, is kidding himself if he really believes in the avowed purpose of unionism which is promotion of a policy of fair play in all relationships between men.

IT MUST BE INSTINCT

The country has caught on to most of the tricks of social agitation by this time, so the brief skirmish incidental to ousting organized relief sidowners from Gov. Davey's waiting room can be viewed philosophically.

The sidowners undoubtedly were interested in the relief problem with which Ohio is dealing at the moment. They had a right to petition the governor and the general assembly. That right existed, regardless of how they chose to employ it and regardless of the nature of their organization—the Ohio Workers' alliance.

They proved by their tactics, however, that they had another motive. Clearly, it was their purpose to try the patience of authorities responsible for maintenance of order in the state office building in the breaking point, then to capitalize on the claim of martyrdom which eviction would establish for them. It must be instinct which draws social agitators and their stooges so surely to the places where trouble can be made.

They made trouble. Gov. Davey will feel the lash of their tongues for doing what they deliberately goaded him into doing. The fact remains that they were dealt with reasonably, even permitted to take liberties which individual citizens would not be allowed to take and wouldn't demand.

The success of their sidown in the governor's reception room depended on being thrown out, so it may be assumed they are happy. At the same time, Ohioans who do not admire the strategy of martyrdom which such persons favor are not unhappy about what happened, and that seems to make things even all the way around.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, April 14

A day of perplexity and doubt is indicated by the contradictory force of major planetary directions.

while things may be lively and enterprising enough, events may arise and propositions be offered calling for very wise decisions and shrewd business acumen. These may involve change of plans or possible travel. However, calm judgment and lack of impetuous conduct, disputes and violence, with a firm restraint of the emotions, is important to success.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a lively and probably exciting year, calling for all their shrewd and sagacious business talents, calm judgment and sound decisions, free from rancor, impetuosity, violence and antagonism. Refrain from strife, contention and emotional excitement.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, determined and bold in putting over constructive plans. It may lean toward taking big chances, possibly to its detriment. It should be trained in calmness and self-discipline in its emotions and impulses. It may be prone to sidestep the conventional and orthodox. Open and subtle opposition figures in its life.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, April 13—Psychiatrists say every person has an avoidance complex. A dread of passing some building, block, area or scene in which one has experienced unhappiness. To visit such places after leaving them brings on a fit of what the darkey calls "the miseries."

Billie Burke shrinks from visiting the great Tarrytown estate where she spent her honeymoon and so many happy years. Earl Carroll until recently never passed through the block upon which he built the theatre bearing his name and which he subsequently lost.

My bete noir has always been the south-west corner of Broadway and Fulton street, now graced by an imposing building but once the site of the old Evening Mail. My first newspaper home in the metropolis, it was the only editorial shop I ever knew without glamour.

Others who worked there—across from St. Paul's grave yard by the way—have told me of suffering similar qualms. Yet from the Evening Mail emerged many newspaper stars such as Grantland Rice, Rube Goldberg, Ed Sullivan, F. P. A. and others. Stars out of the dusk!

Wall Street now has a walk uptown crowd. When the bell closes the Stock Exchange, bankers, brokers, customers' men and buyers, instead of bowling north in their limousines "take it on the hoof." Oddly enough, a booming market has always increased enthusiasm for the art ambulandi. In the months before the great crash hundreds were walking, but after the debacle returned to their cars. Too weak to walk, maybe!

Many high-powered executives uptown these days have their office shower into which they step after finishing a busy day. The first shower of this sort was installed by Winnie Sheehan at his film offices on Tenth avenue. Then there is the army of masseurs who call around 8 a. m. on the biggies in their hotel or apartment suites or private homes to give them brisk rubdowns. Incidentally, physical culturists say the most perfectly conditioned business man in town is the dapper and polished jeweler, Jules Glazer.

The most tireless walker in town continues to be the stalwart Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the Times. He has been a walker all his life and his physical fitness is proof of the value of such simple exercise. He always heels off five miles every day, aside from the ordinary steps his duties require. And once a year he walks the entire distance around Manhattan Island. John D. Jr. is a confirmed walker, ticking off several miles every late afternoon.

The begging business—save for the hopeless cripples whose plight is obvious—has come almost to a full stop in New York. I cannot remember encountering a moocher in the past two years, whereas before that they were generally several to the block, especially after dark. Many causes contribute to the abandonment. The propaganda of charity societies that to give alms on the streets defeats their high aims is the biggest factor. Next, of course, are the known relief agencies and the general knowledge that no one is to go hungry in this country. Lodging houses on the Bowery that used to house professional mendicants say all their patrons have given up the calling.

Interlude with philosophy: They hopped off their taxi seats in the Biltmore cab line swinging viciously at each other. Then they circled about in slavermouth growling rage until one said something to the other that made them drop their defenses, and soon they were leaning against a post exchanging cigarette lights and friendly talk. "Them boys has more sense than a lot of people and most nations," said the corner cop.

PELLAGRA

PROPER DIET is the most important factor in the prevention and cure of pellagra. This serious disease afflicted over 150,000 individuals in the United States in 1917. I am happy to say that since then the number of cases has greatly decreased.

But to safeguard our children against the danger of this ailment, it is important for those planning the family diet to know something about pellagra. Widespread knowledge concerning the prevention and cure of this disease, and of other diseases, too, will do much to raise the general health standards.

Pellagra is known as a "dietary deficiency" disease. It is caused by a lack of vitamin G. It generally results from the steady eating of sweets, highly-milled cereals, and fats. Such foods are staple items in the dietary of individuals in many sections of the country. The more important milk, fruits and vegetables are seldom used.

Digestion Upset
Experimental efforts to relieve the sufferers from pellagra proved that a diet rich in fresh fruits, vegetables, meat, eggs and milk was a successful cure. I am referring to the treatment of those in the early stages of the disease. Advanced cases are more difficult.

This disease has characteristic symptoms. Generally a skin rash of a reddish color appears on the face, hands and neck. Other parts of the body may be discolored. The digestion is upset. Diarrhea often weakens the sufferer. His mouth and tongue are sore. If the disease is not recognized and properly treated, further distressing and serious symptoms appear. When the diet is adjusted, the victim is quickly cured.

Frequently I receive letters from persons living in rural districts which are far distant from markets. These individuals are confronted with the problem of getting fresh fruits and vegetables. They know these foods are important in the dietary and ask what can be substituted for them.

Let me say that, when fresh fruits and vegetables and even milk are unobtainable, it is wise to substitute canned varieties. Canned foods are tasty and contain nearly all of the food substances found in fresh varieties. They will help balance a diet that might otherwise be too one-sided.

In a diet that is not restricted there is little danger of a deficiency disease.

Answers to Health Queries
A Reader, Q.—What causes dry rough skin on a child? The skin is very dry and rough and forms scales. It is all over her body—hands, face and neck are not affected.

A.—There are many different types of skin disturbances. This condition should not be neglected. Have the child thoroughly examined by your physician.

Dr. Copeland is glad to answer inquiries from readers who send an addressed, stamped envelope with their questions. Address all letters to Dr. Copeland, New York City.

So economical that it actually costs less to own than many cars of lower price

Look at La Salle!

OCCASIONALLY, someone says to us—"True, La Salle is low in price, but what about upkeep cost and operating expense?" This is a question we like to answer—because the facts all point to La Salle. La Salle's great V-8 engine is extremely economical. Chances are you will notice no increase in gasoline at all when you step up to La Salle. And no car is more sparing in its use of oil. Too, La Salle service costs are extremely reasonable. And don't forget this—La Salle is built by Cadillac, to Cadillac standards, and it does a great job of STAYING OUT OF THE SERVICE STATION. It is a literal fact that La Salle is likely to cost you less to own, all things considered, than cars that would cost you even less to buy. Come in today—and LOOK AT LA SALLE!

CHAPTER XVIII

"I'll get your father on the telephone at once, Denise. I should have thought of telephoning yesterday. He'll tell you how much Felicia's improved by now. Only, please don't read any more."

He was aware of her eyes following him across the room when he put in the transatlantic call. He said, to break the silence that seemed to hang in the air: "Wish your father had thought to telephone us."

The operator said, "We'll call you," and he hung up the receiver. Denise's voice from behind the newspaper said: "Father wouldn't spend five dollars more of your money than he absolutely had to."

"My dear, my dear, I only said that about the money last night, as a kind of appeal to your pride. Please forgive me. I wanted you not to do something that might have spoiled your life."

She laughed. "Don't worry now. This makes you safe." And she laughed again; he thought that laughter the most dreadful sound that he had ever heard.

"Don't you want to know this, Gilbert?" she read aloud: "Keith Sheldie suffered a broken right leg and arm, lacerations of the head and neck, and possible internal injuries."

"I don't care. I don't care, Denise," something in his voice caught at her. She laid down the newspaper and said in a surprised voice: "Why, you're suffering, too. Why should you suffer, Gilbert?"

"Because I happen to love you," he flung the words at her, and then was sorry. She looked so pitiful.

"I know, it's too bad," she said, as if he had remarked that it was raining. Then he realized by the sudden tremor in her tone that she didn't know what she was saying, and his anger vanished.

The telephone rang. "Steady now, Denise. These transatlantic connections are very good. You don't want your father or mother to be disturbed by the way you sound."

He heard Michael Rendal's voice and said: "Are you all right, sir? Is there anything at all I can do? Denise is naturally very worried about Felicia's condition."

Then he heard Denise's voice and said: "Pick up your bedroom extension, Denise. Then you can talk when you like, or remind me if I forget to ask anything you want to know."

Denise heard her father's voice so gentle, so kind: "Felicia is much better, completely out of danger. Of course she will have to be quiet for months, and we can't tell about scars yet."

Denise said: "Hello, Father. Are you all right?"

"How are you, my dear? I'm putting your mother on. There's something she wants to tell you."

And there was her mother's clear voice: "Denise, dear! You must not worry. What I wanted to say was, don't think of coming home. Both your father and I feel your place is with your husband, Eustace, your father and I will see this through. We much prefer that you remain away."

"Poor Eustace!" Denise said. Firmly, her mother answered: "He is being altogether splendid. Then it was as if her courage ran out. She said brokenly: 'How could Felicia—' and her words trailed off. She went on, though, quickly: 'Your father and I think we'll go abroad with Felicia as soon as she is able to travel. Our affairs are in better order, thanks to dear Gilbert. Do you tell him how grateful we are?'"

"Yes," said Denise. "So we may see you in June, in England. We are so glad that one of our daughters is happy and secure."

"Yes," said Denise. "Now you must not let this spoil your wedding journey, dearest—and we must not spend Gilbert's money so recklessly talking at length. I'll put your father on, to say good-by to you."

"Wait a minute, Mother, I want—I want—" she said then, weakly, "to hear your voice some more."

But Gilbert on the other extension helped her. "We're going to do this more often, Mrs. Rendale. We've been very neglectful."

"It's a comfort to hear you, Gilbert, to feel that our little daughter is protected and fortunate."

"I was just curious," Gilbert said very casually. "Did Sheldie live?" Denise felt her heart stop and start again. She had wanted to ask, and dared not. Her mother's even words were: "Yes, he's recovering. Not that I can find it in my heart to care."

"Quite," said Gilbert, and went straight on past that. "I do hope you sail and join us. We might take a house in Scotland. Denise misses you."

There was a pretty trill of laughter in her mother's voice. "That's very sweet of you, Gilbert, but I can't imagine how greatly a happy young wife misses her mother. You have cheered me up! I didn't think I should ever laugh again. Really, I'm not being selfish and monopolizing this conversation; Michael's listening on my bedroom extension."

"You sound like yourself, now, Mother," Denise made her own voice light as possible. "We have two extensions too, so Gilbert heard all your gaudy praises. You'll make him very conceited."

Her father's laughter boomed in then. "Be a good wife, Denise; it's the only happiness. Good-by, my dear. —Good-by, Gilbert."

"We'll call again in a few days," Gilbert said. Everyone repeated, "Good-by." Gilbert opened her bedroom door. "Do you feel better, Denise?"

"Yes; thank you for asking what I didn't ask."

"All right, let's not speak of it again. May I throw away those newspapers? The only thing you may have missed is an account of our relationship to Felicia, a brief resume of the history of my father's and grandfather's fortune, and some pictures of us and our wedding."

"Do you mind, Gilbert?" "Not a bit, if you don't."

"Gilbert, would you feel I was behaving badly if I looked my door and wept for an hour?"

"Yes, Denise, because it wouldn't do you the slightest good."

Politely, listlessly, she said: "As you will. What do we do next?" "Dress and dine. We might go to the theater."

"So life goes on."

The words echoed in her memory. That day when she had come home to Felicia's urging her to marry, Felicia had said: "Life goes on. One holds one's head up." Could Felicia still hold her red-gold head as erect as ever?

She struggled desperately to lift her own, not to weep. "So we dine, we go to the theater. And then what?"

Gilbert looked at her. She caught her breath. He watched her face, and his own suffered. "Why then, tomorrow or the next day, as soon as we get visas, we might go to Russia. I'd like to see the Soviets. How nearly he had come to saying: 'Then you might let me take you in my arms and try to be happy.' But not for her unhappy eyes could he say that."

"All right, let's go to Russia."

And three days later they started. By implicit agreement they did not speak again of Felicia or of Keith in those days when she was conscious that he was waiting for some word she had not spoken, and he was conscious that she made trivial jests, laughed with effort, at his slightest attempt at gaiety, and kept her thoughts altogether from him.

In that time she was not thinking of him, but not of herself either, but of her sister's whole life, from her first memories of her. . . . Of Keith, in the months that seemed so far away, when had so loved had forgotten her loved he and she would marry and spend their lives together. Never, never now.

There were hours when a slow rage burned in her. Those two she had so loved had had forgotten her quickly enough, had betrayed her easily, and yet her rage was not enduring. As they were, they were—more modern than herself, if to be modern was to be exigent about one's own desires.

Though she herself had been exigent too, for a brief time, about

Keith. And Felicia had not been exigent through years of her marriage with Eustace, when she made the best of things, and never certainly took advantage before of her innumerable opportunities for adventure, at Eustace's expense.

People were not consistent. That was her first bit of wisdom about people in general. From that she progressed, slowly and painfully, to a realization that Keith and Felicia were rather alike in their dispositions, were reckless, impatient, without belief in anyone very much, nor in themselves at all.

Yet with herself gone from their lives, she could understand that they could have found a great deal in common. If she, Denise, had not married Gilbert, Felicia's loyalty would have held her from Keith. If she had not married Gilbert, though Keith quarreled with her and they parted, he would have gone to her sister for consolation, last of all women in New York.

Even if she had married and still remained a person present in their days, thought of her might have kept them from each other. But she had married, and sailed the day after her wedding-day. It was as definite a punctuation, almost, as if she had died. They could feel justified in ignoring any possible effect upon her, of their approach to each other.

In either of their places, she might have done the same thing. Felicia and Keith had much more in common than herself and Felicia, and herself and Keith. When she was able to say those two things, much bitterness went from her. But besides the hurt to her feeling of self-importance (which she could estimate now, and divide from the hurt to her love for those two), something else disturbed her: The feeling that it was unworthy of the sort of persons she had thought them, to have a furtive love-affair.

FINICKY APPETITES OFTEN ONE RESULT OF CONSTIPATION

When nothing tastes right, and you don't eat as you should, the trouble may be common constipation. Poor appetite is one of its symptoms. Others are headaches, listlessness and sallow complexions.

Constipation is usually due to "low-bulk" meals. Serve your family Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—a generous source of "bulk."

Within the body, this food absorbs twice its weight in water, and gently exercises and sponges out the system. How much better than taking pills and drugs!

ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Three times daily, in severe cases. Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into appetizing muffins, breads, etc.

Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CARS BETTERED BY INSPECTIONS

Compulsory Practice In Connecticut Reduces Accidents

Connecticut's experience with compulsory inspection of all motor vehicles since July 1, 1935 has been satisfactory to the state motor vehicle department, which describes the plan as fundamentally sound and fair with differences of opinion only concerning details of operation.

Inspection results, observations on the road and reports from repairmen show that vehicles are in much better condition than they were before the semi-annual inspections started. The following table shows steadily declining percentages of rejected cars to the total inspection and of those rejected for bad brakes and lights:

Inspections	First	Second	Third
Rejections	53 pct	28 pct	34 pct
Rejections for:

According to Wilbur I. Cross, Jr., chief engineer of the motor vehicle department, repair jobs have been steadily increasing. "The perfect combination is a safe car in the hands of a safe driver," he says. "If the only return gained by the public as a result of compulsory mechanical inspection were that less, the activity would be well worth while as a safety measure."

An operator careless about the mechanical condition of his car inevitably becomes careless concerning its operation. Inspections play an important part in reminding motorists of their responsibilities and emphasize safety in a forceful manner. It is not fair to condemn inspection because statistics do not reveal a grave percentage of accidents caused by mechanical defects.

Some operators are lax in attending to the needs of their cars and often operate with poor brakes, if any. After an accident these operators, if alive, never admit a defect in their cars or in their driving. They conjure up an alibi and stick to it. It may well be that mechanically defective cars figure in a great many more traffic mishaps than the records show.

Gene Sarazen Says Sub-Par Ballyhoo Deceives Golfing Dubs

Most Golf Courses Today Easy For Pro But Tough For Average Simon Pure

"Par Isn't Par Any More", Veteran Gene Sarazen Says; Courses Have Not Kept Step With Time, and Modern Equipment Is Belief

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 13.—Mr. Average Citizen, says Gene Sarazen, the golfing-farmer from Connecticut, is being deceived by the ballyhoo of "par-cracking" scores.

"Par isn't par any more," he said.

"Today, we are playing with modern, scientifically made equipment, but over courses that have not kept step with time."

Sarazen, in Asheville for an exhibition match, recalled the scoring a week ago in the Augusta national tournament, saying that on no day was par more than 68, when the card showed it 72. The winning score was 283 by Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., five under official par, but Gene says it was 11 strokes over the actual standard figures.

He said four years of competition have proved the "masters" course at Augusta to be "a weak test."

"Most courses of the present day," he says, "are easy for the pro and hard for the club member. They put bunkers 150 or 175 yards away from the tee, here the average golfer will get in trouble. But the pro can carry it with a spoon or brassie."

"Now that clubs are so modernized for a scientific game and the balls travel farther, the courses should be remodeled and strengthened. By that I don't mean to making the rough rougher or holes too long for the average player. Take the par 5 holes throughout America and you'll find 9 out of 10 have the largest greens. They should be the smallest and the most treacherous. The par 5 holes are all being reached in two blows."

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, April 13.—Canadian papers hear Rabbit Maravich is only stopping off at Montreal on his way back to the majors as a manager, outfielder Nino Bongiovanni of Portland is making things plenty tough for the printers around the Pacific Coast league. A story going the rounds in Philly that LaFayette would like to get Everett E. (Hooks) Mylin from Bucknell to succeed Ernie Nevers as football coach of the Cardinals, who have never stopped kicking themselves for letting Virgil Davis get away, tried to buy him back for cash last week.

The east will get another taste of the southwest conference's razzle dazzle brand of football if the Cardinals, who have backed success in getting on the Borton College or Holy Cross, schedules next year. A war correspondent in the south reports the Indians and the Giants are feeding because the Giants took Bob Feller's pitching apart in the papers for failing to do same on the field. Roscoe Toles, Detroit Negro heavyweight, says he is considering an offer to become a sparring partner for Jimmy Braddock at $100 per day.

Rip Radcliffe, White Sox outfielder, always eats his dessert before the other courses, when 124 hopefuls reported for spring football practice at Michigan State, Coach Charlie Bachman erected a portable platform 12 feet above the ground from which to direct the record turn-out. The Yankees barnstormers, featuring Gehrig and DiMaggio, continue to pack 'em in through the south. Harry Balsamo, hard-hitting middleweight, is trying a comeback via the New York subway circuit.

COMEBACK BOUT FOR CANZONERI

Former Champion Takes Another Step Toward Top Tonight

NEW YORK, April 13.—Tony Canzoneri, who once achieved considerable fame as a "man who came back," tries another step along the comeback trail, via New York's "subway" fight circuit, tonight against rugged Frankie Wallace of Cleveland.

The ten round bout at the Broadway arena in Brooklyn is the last scrap he has scheduled before meeting Lou Ambers next month in an effort to regain the lightweight title he lost twice and regained once.

A veteran of the squared circle and former holder of the featherweight crown Canzoneri held the lightweight title from 1930 until he was beaten by Barney Ross in 1933. After Ross outgrew the class, Canzoneri again won recognition as champion by beating Ambers, the man who took it away from him the second time last September.

BRADLEY LUCK TO BE FACTOR IN DERBY AGAIN

Brooklyn and Billionaire Will Carry the Famous "White and Green"

NEW YORK, April 13.—Col. Edward R. Bradley had no outstanding 2-year-olds in racing in 1935 or 1936. However, the presence of two colts among the candidates for the 63rd running of the $50,000 added stakes at Churchill Downs has given the followers of the Kentuckian's "white and green" silks some encouragement.

In last year's running of the mile and a quarter 3-year-old classic, Bien Joli, at odds of 15 to 1, finished fifth in a field of 14 after running what the charts called "an even race."

Brooklyn and Billionaire are Bradley's hopeful entries in the May 8 classic and handbooks in the Bluegrass have been backing the colts with renewed enthusiasm as the daily reports of their training reach their ears.

There's magic to the name of "Bradley" when mentioned in connection with the Kentucky Derby. Planters of those silks already have been four times past the winning post. In every case there has been an element of surprise or exciting incident.

Behave Yourself in 1921 was supposed to play second fiddle to the more sensational and higher-regarded Black Servant. As it happened, Thompson, the stable's second-string rider, outfinished Lawrence Lyke, "first jockey."

Behave Yourself was first home, with his stablemate second. As the story goes, Bradley had wagered heavily on Black Servant in the winter books. The story was never denied that Bradley would have won a vast amount from the future layers had Black Servant won.

The Bradley second triumph was another one-two victory, with the speeding Bubbling Over first and Bagenbaggage second. This was one of the fastest-run Derbys of all, 1926, when the Easterners went down with a thud as W. R. Coe's Pompey was conquered.

Burgoo King was a mild surprise winner in 1932. That is, he was a mild surprise to all except the thousands of Kentuckians who were trusting to Bradley luck.

Through 1932, Broker's Tip failed to win a race. He went to the post a maiden on Derby day and came home the winner in probably the most sensational race in history. It was a jockey and horse duel—Broker's Tip with Don Meade up and Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Head Pia with R. Fisher in the saddle. Meade proved the better of the two in one of the tightest of finishes, the winner paying about 9 to 1. Both riders drew suspensions for their Cossack tactics during the race, but the players collected.

In view of Bradley's luck in connection with the Derby, it is small wonder there is marked support for the colts' two candidates this year. Brooklyn, heavily backed by Bradley himself, is currently quoted at 6 to 1, while Billionaire is held at 20 to 1.

Brooklyn started four times in 1936. He won two races, an overnight event and the Walden Handicap at Pimlico. He finished second to Matey in the Pimlico Futurity when the Jeffords' colt was awarded the purse through the disqualification of Privileged.

Billionaire made 14 trips to the races as a 2-year-old. He won six times, finished second once and third twice.

Brooklyn is a bay son of Blue Larkspur, out of Knockaway Bridge. Billionaire is a brown-skinned colt by Black Toney, out of Porters. Both colts are well advanced in their training at the Idle Hour Farm in Kentucky.

BOWLING RESULTS

The Smith Garage quintet which paced the Quaker City league for several months was out of first place for the first time today after losing three games to the Economy V-8's at the Grate Recreation alleys last night.

The three set-backs lowered the Garagemen a notch in the league standings and enabled the Tigers, who won three games from the First National Bank, to move into first place.

One other league match last night saw the fifth-place Church Budget win two out of three games from the Pure Oils.

In the American league at the Masonic temple alleys last night the Ohio Edison remained within range of the leading position by winning three games from the Salem News. The Edisonites are in third place in the American loop, but are not far out of first.

Training Camp Briefs

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Manager Joe McCarthy's latest pitching plan for the New York Yankees calls Lefty Gomez, Monte Pearson, and Johnny Murphy as starting pitchers in the early part of the season.

ROME, Ga.—The Cleveland Indians, figured to have one of the strongest pitching staffs in the majors, are bothered by slowness of regulars in rounding into form. Only Rookie Bob Feller has appeared ready to take his place among the four starters.

DURHAM, N. C.—Benny Frey, smallest hurler of 11 on the Cincinnati Reds' roster, was akin to the "forgotten man" today as the Reds came here to continue their series with Boston's Red Sox. Frey hasn't seen exhibition game service yet. Mgr. Chuck Dressen indicated it wasn't an oversight, adding "I know what he can do."

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—Big Russell Batters, recruit pitcher from Wisconsin, will be a regular with the Pittsburgh Pirates this season. Batters originally was headed for the Montreal Internationals, but President William Bensinger said another pitcher, probably Ken Heintzelman, would be sent to the Royals.

DURHAM, N. C.—John "Footsie" Marcum got the call today to pitch for the Red Sox against the Cincinnati Reds in the clubs' second game in two days. The Sox won the first game yesterday, 2 to 1, with a ninth-inning rally.

CARD BASEBALL SCHOOL OPENED

50 Candidates On Hand For Training In St. Louis Camp

PORTSMOUTH, April 13.—Fifty additional candidates were expected to arrive today to augment the 150 already here for practice at the baseball school of the St. Louis Cardinals in Riverside park.

The school opened yesterday under the direction of Charlie Popi Kelchner, head scout of the National league outfit. The candidates included Jimmy Dykes and Babe Zayaz, signed by the Portsmouth Redbirds baseball club.

A team was expected to be whipped into shape for an exhibition Friday with the parent Cardinals team, according to Benny Borgman, manager of the Huntington, W. Va., club last season before the Middle-Atlantic franchise was transferred to Portsmouth.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. — Joe Dusek, 23, Omaha, threw Lavern Baxter, 228, North Carolina, (12-27).

National Bowling Meet Goes Through Slump as Leaders Are Unchanged

Canton Team of McCoy and David Leads Doubles Competition Last Night With 1,286; Tim Moran, Alex Graham Get In Money In Singles

NEW YORK, April 13.—The tumult and the shouting of last weekend's high scoring spree of the American Bowling Congress is apparently a thing of the past. Competition yesterday was unexciting and there seemed small chance that any of today's bowlers will disturb the divisional leaders.

SPEAKER STILL IS IN DANGER

Condition of Former Indian Manager Remains Critical

CLEVELAND, April 13.—Tris Speaker, baseball immortal and former manager of the Cleveland Indians who suffered a fractured skull in a fall Sunday, remained in a critical condition today at Lakeside hospital.

He isn't out of the woods yet," said Dr. E. B. Castle, I feel that he will recover, but complications may develop. His condition still is critical."

The 49-year-old outfielder fell 16 feet to a stone walk at his home and surgeons took 100 stitches in a wound that extended from his left eye to his neck.

Another Ohio duo, Basil Fazio and Tony Galati, of Akron set the day's pace in the doubles division with a 1,284 total and the Harris Quints of Wooster topped the first squad of five man teams with a 2,930 total.

The standings were unchanged at the conclusion of the session.

GOVERNOR ASKS RELIEF TAXES

Problem Is Heading For Showdown Before Senate Today

Leaders pointed out, would provide no more than administrative machinery. It would not solve the relief problem until the legislature produced the funds.

Favor Deferring Taxes
Apparently unmoved by the governor's plea for immediate tax enactments, the Democratic majority was reliably reported to favor deferring action on taxes until after the biennial appropriation bill was cleared.

The Workers Alliance delegation, northern county relief clients whose sit-down demonstration in the governor's office was broken up last week, decided at a night meeting to return to their homes.

The house taxation committee, announcing first hearings Wednesday morning, narrowed the field of relief taxes to these proposals with yield estimates:

Three per cent tax on utility payments by consumers, $7,500,000 a year.

One cent increase in liquid fuel (new three cents), $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 annually.

One-half cent increase in liquid fuel levy with a boost in admission taxes three to 10 per cent, $8,500,000 a year.

Raising sales tax from three to four per cent, $12,000,000 annually.

LABOR RULING STARTS DRIVES

Hours, Wage Campaigns Loom Following Wagner Edict

Three Democratic senators generally considered noncommittal on the issue—Brown of Michigan, Schweikert of Washington and Duffy of Wisconsin—indicated they would be receptive to compromise.

Possible compromises most discussed were:

To add two or four instead of six justices.

To require a two-thirds vote of the court to invalidate any law.

To make retirement from the court mandatory at 70 or 75 or after a specified term of service.

Chairman Ashurst (D-Ariz.) of the judiciary committee, declared against compromise. A possible inkling of administration determination to carry through came in comment by Attorney General Cummings that the decisions "show the wisdom of the President's plan."

Secretary Perkins called the rulings proof that the Constitution "is indeed broad enough to give congress power to deal with our most pressing social and industrial problems when the court is willing to recognize the statutory technique."

Green and Lewis Agree

Foes though they are on the issue of craft against industrial unionism, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization expressed satisfaction over the decisions.

Green predicted an upsurge in union organization and the end of company unions. Lewis, terming the court "variable as the wind," said the situation in which one justice holds such power needed change and the President's court bill was the answer.

J. Warren Madden, chairman of the Wagner Labor board, foresaw greater industrial peace as a result. If employers respect the decisions, he said, strikes to obtain collective bargaining rights no longer will be necessary.

Pledging respect for the labor act as interpreted by the court the National Association of Manufacturers said in New York.

"We trust that similar respect for this law and other laws will be recognized as well by leaders of organized labor."

Senator Wagner (D-N. Y.) took exception to the views of some colleagues that the decisions warranted more immediate legislation on relations.

THEATER Attractions

Two double bills occupy the screens at the theaters Wednesday and Thursday. At the State are Charles Laughton's "Rembrandt" and a hilarious comedy starring Arthur Treacher in the title role, "Step Lively Jeeves". The Grand offers a daffy story of a racketeering expose, "Don't Tell the Wife", and a western, "Lucky Terror".

Charles Laughton, master at characterization, turns in one of the best, if not the best, performance of his successful career in "Rembrandt", a pictorial account of the life of the greatest of Dutch painters.

Angers Townsmen
The picture opens with the artist at the height of his career, happy with his wife, Saskia, and his children. Comes Saskia's oath and tragedy of a group of townsmen angrers them because he made them unwilling figures on a great canvas filled with color and beauty but not with their faces.

His fortunes go from bad to worse, with Gertrude, played by Gertrude Lawrence, the faithful housekeeper doing her best to keep food in the house and secretly hoping one day to take the beloved Saskia's place.

Then he meets a young country girl, Hendrickje, who inspires him to do his greatest work, brings him love and happiness. The jealous housekeeper denounces them to the church and the girl is excommunicated.

When Rembrandt wishes to marry her the law steps in and says that the money Saskia, the first wife, left their son must be paid him before Rembrandt can marry again. The money has been lost in the wars and not through any fault of the painter, who must go to work to pay his son.

Hendrickje Dies
Hendrickje, to help him earn money to live and to pay his debt, "employs" him herself. When he has nearly paid his creditors and the courts, Hendrickje dies, leaving their child to the poverty-stricken painter. The part of Hendrickje is played by Elsa Lanchester, Miss Lanchester plays for the second time with her husband. The first was as Ann of Cleve in "The Private Life of Henry VIII."

"Waikiki Wedding", with Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Bob Burns and Martha Raye will be seen for the last time tonight at the State.

Una Merkel, Lynne Overman and Guy Kibbee play the leading roles in "Don't Tell the Wife", Miss Merkel is the wife of Overman, whose intentions are good but who just can't resist the lure of quick but questionable get-rich methods. Kibbee is the glib, naive "front" for a fake stock-selling concern run by Overman.

At The Grand
Hoot Gibson is the central figure in "Lucky Terror", the western thriller which completes the Grand's double bill.

Jack Holt and Mae Clarke in "Trouble in Morocco" and "Midnight Taxi", with Brian Donlevy and Frances Drake, conclude tonight at the Grand.

HOW DOES LABOR ACT OPERATE?

Questions and Answers Consider Wagner Bill Provisions

of workers to collective bargaining. Q. In the General Motors and Chrysler labor disputes, both companies agreed after the strikes to recognize the union as representative of its own members but not of other workers. How was this possible?

A. No election was requested to determine if the union spoke for a majority of employees. Q. Can corporations still promote "company unions" or employee representation plans?

A. The law forbids corporations from dominating or interfering with unions or contributing to their support. President Green of the American Federation of Labor said, "It means the end of company unions."

Q. Will the labor relations board have authority over bargaining in all industrial plants in the United States?

A. No. The law applies only to firms held to be in interstate commerce. Q. Who decides whether a firm is in interstate commerce?

A. Lawyers believe future decisions of the supreme court will determine cases where a question arises. Q. Is an owner barred from dismissing any union man without consent of the union?

A. No, but a worker can not be dismissed because of union membership or activity. Q. Suppose a company believes the board has been unfair. Has it any redress?

A. Yes, it can defend itself in hearings before the board, and attack the board's order in federal court.
